

NEED TO KNOW

Instructor education – practical information

Welcome! Here is all you need to know for planning and deciding your participation in the education.

FAIRSTART FOUNDATION

HELP CHILDREN SAVE THE WORLD

What is my first step when I want to be an instructor?

Before beginning the instructor education, you or your organisation must make an agreement with a caregiver group that would like to learn more of the basic skills of working with children and youth without parental care. This caregiver group should consist of four to twenty people, but if you are experienced in training groups, you can include more participants. Between the instructor modules, you train a group of caregivers five to six times in three-hour training sessions.

Do I study and work alone?

No, you are working in an online class with fellow students, and may also arrange to train the caregiver group together with another instructor student. Your class will also get online support from Fairstart during the education.

If you haven't been there yet, examine our free demo containing the introduction module and module 1:

Go to www.fairstartinstructor.com, click Free demo, register with your mail and a password of your choice, click Sign In and click Enroll in Demo. See how to navigate the platform, and click Course to study module 1.

How do we work together in the class and how do we support each other?

The instructor education requires a lot of group work, peer assessments and peer feedback. Hence, the minimum number of participants is four. However, as all group activities take place online, instructor students do not have to be located near each other - they can participate in the online classroom from various countries around the globe, which can make your training and exchange of knowledge even more exciting.
